

TEPPER'S GUIDE TO RESEARCHING MEDICATIONS

Re the websites I use in court to check out meds, lately I have been googling the med and the dr. to see if there are articles about the dr. and investigation. As well as looking for recent legal action/findings re the drugs. I have 2 ok booklets from the state of FL re types of Mental disorder and meds and age approved, side effects, etc. Not easy to use quickly. They are set up by Disorder. Others I use include:

<http://www.nlm.nih.gov/medlineplus/druginformation.html> this is US National Library of Medicine & Nat'l. Institute of Health. It allows you to select the medication via alphabetized list and has major warnings, if any, when you get to that link.

<http://www.nimh.nih.gov/health/publications/mental-health-medications/> gets you to an intro on MH meds and what meds are used for each disorder.

<http://www.webmd.com/drugs/index-drugs.aspx> not a gov't site I just use if looking to id a drug.

Lastly: <http://www.fda.gov/> for recalls, safety alerts

TEPPER'S GUIDE TO RESEARCHING MEDICATIONS

Re the websites I use in court to check out meds, lately I have been googling the med and the dr. to see if there are articles about the dr. and investigation. As well as looking for recent legal action/findings re the drugs. I have 2 ok booklets from the state of FL re types of Mental disorder and meds and age approved, side effects, etc. Not easy to use quickly. They are set up by Disorder. Others I use include:

<http://www.nlm.nih.gov/medlineplus/druginformation.html> this is US National Library of Medicine & Nat'l. Institute of Health. It allows you to select the medication via alphabetized list and has major warnings, if any, when you get to that link.

<http://www.nimh.nih.gov/health/publications/mental-health-medications/> gets you to an intro on MH meds and what meds are used for each disorder.

<http://www.webmd.com/drugs/index-drugs.aspx> not a gov't site I just use if looking to id a drug.

Lastly: <http://www.fda.gov/> for recalls, safety alerts